

ABSTRACT

The present invention includes a magnetic sensing structure having a stripe height and a stripe width defining an area for a current flowing therethrough, and at least one electrode positioned adjacent an edge of the magnetic sensing structure for adjustably controlling the stripe width and/or stripe height, and therefore the area ($SW \times SH$), of the magnetic sensing structure through which the current can flow.